Understanding Community-level Public Health Preparedness for Wildland Fire Smoke

Deadline: September 4th

Our team is working to better understand how communities, including tribal communities, prepare for wildland fire smoke events from a public health perspective, and the processes that are involved in that preparation. For this project we are interested in highlighting a handful of communities that are on the leading edge of smoke response preparedness and that are developing plans for their community response to smoke events. The working title of the project is, Understanding Community-level Public Health Preparedness for Wildland Fire Smoke, and this is related to some of the broader Smoke Ready Communities work currently underway. If someone from your community is currently or interested in working on a wildland fire smoke community response plan, and would like to discuss the project more we would like to meet and learn more. Please reach out to us, we would be happy to share with you more information about the Smoke Ready Communities project and look forward to learning about your community. You may contact James Payne at payne.jamesj@epa.gov by September 4th.
